

Angulalik Time Line Cards– Student Copy

With your group cut out all of the cards. Put the cards in chronological order of Stephen Angulalik's life. You should be able to tell the order from the wording on the cards, or referring to the website. In the cards there are places that are underlined. Find all of these places on your map of the Kitikmeot.

The Canalaska Trading Company and the Hudson's Bay Company arrived in the Kitikmeot.

Angulalik learned about the fur trading business by working with Hugh Clarke from the HBC post at Kent Peninsula.

Canalaska sold out to the HBC who then became Angulalik's supplier.

Angulalik was born in the area of Ellice River on the Queen Maud Gulf.

The arrival of the independent trader Christian Klengenbergh marked the beginning of the fur trade in the Kitikmeot Region, and was the beginning of continuous contact with the outside world.

Commercial whaling came to an end in the western Arctic and whalers took interest in fur trading

Angulalik became an independent fur trader supplied by Canalska.

Angulalik was acquitted of his murder charge and continued as an employee of the Perry River trading post until it closed.

The HBC and Canalska trading posts at Perry River were forced to shut down.

Angulalik again works closely with Clarke when Clarke returned to the north to open a Canalaska trading post at Perry River.

Angulalik was charged with murder. He then sold his post to the HBC.
